Reminiscences of General Washington.

"You say," I remarked to the old negro who drove the hack, "that you were General Washington's body servant?"

"Dat's so! Dat's jes so, massa. I done waited on Washington sence he was so high—no bigger'n a small child."

"You know the story, then, about the cherry tree and the hatchet?"

"Know it? Why I was dar on de spot. I see massa Gawge climb de tree after de cherries, and I seen him fling de hatchet at de boys who was a stoin' him. I done chase dem boys off de place myself."

"Do you remember his appearance as a man? What he looked like?"

"Yes, indeed. He was kinder short and chunky; sorter fat and hearty-lookin'. He had chin whiskers and mustache and spectacles. Mos' generally he wore a high hat; but I see him in a fur cap with ear-warmers!"

"You were not with him, of course, when he crossed the Delaware—when he went across the Delaware River?"

"Wid him? Yes, sir! I was right dar. I was not more'n two feet off'n him as he druv across de bridge in his buggy; dat's a fact. I walked 'longside de off hind wheel of dat buggy all the way."

"You saw him then when he fought the British at Trenton?"

"She's you're born I did! I held Massa Gawge's coat 'at while he fought the British at dat werry place. Massa Gawge clinched him and den dey rassed and rassed, and at first he frow Massa Gawge, and den Massa Gawge flung him, and set on him and done hammered him till he cried 'nuff! Massa Gawge won dat fight. I seed him wid me own eyes! An' I come home wid him in the kysar!"

"You weren't with him though when he shot the apple off the boy's head?"

"Who wa'n't wid him? I wa'n't!"

I was de only pusson dar 'ceptin' one white man. I loaded Mossa Gawge's revolver and han'ed it to him, and picked up de apple an' et it soon as he'd knocked it off. Nobody can't tell dish yer ole niggah nuffin 'bout dat circumstance."

"You knew all of the General's relations' too, I suppose? Martin Luther and Peter the Hermit and the rest?"

"Knowed 'em all. Many and many's de time I done waited on de table when Mossa Gawge had um to dinner. I remember dem two gemmen jes 's well's if I'd a seen 'em yesterday. Yes, sah; an' druv 'em out often."

"I've frequently seen pictures of Washington in which 'he is represented sitting upon a white horse. Did he really ride a white horse, or don't you recall the color of his horse?"

"Why, bress your soul; 'eall de color ob de hoss—'eall de color ob de! Do you see dish yer nigh hoss dat I'm drivin' now, right yer? Well, dat's de werry hoss Mossa Gawge used to ride. He lef it to me in his will!"

Just then we reached the station, and I dismounted from the hack and paid Washington's body-servant for his services. No doubt a longer conversation with him would have revealed other new and startling facts relating to the Father of His Country.—Moss Adler in Our Continent.

Peruvian Bitters.

Quelena Bala. The Count Chichen was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1639. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1642, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, and Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Indies. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroy. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A true and lasting cure, that this is the best bitters in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order of: Loeb & Co., agents for Astoria.
